THE HERITAGE THAT IS LOYOLA — Loyola is a Jesuit school. Its customs are Jesuit. Its curriculum is Jesuit. Behind it lie four hundred years of Jesuit thought. It is the product of the Jesuit System of Education functioning through time.

But it is more than that. It is the epitome of the progress made by Education in its several-thousand-year history. For the Jesuits did not invent their system of education; they inherited it. They did not discard the treasured experiences of the ancient world, but they shaped and organized them to a new spiritual and moral ideal. They organized what men had thought for thousands of years in its best, most useful and effective form.

That form has come to be known as Jesuit Education, and the rules for it were set down in the Ratio Studiorum, formally issued in 1599. It has served to perpetuate the Jesuit principles, to hand on to the modern Jesuit school the same spirit that animated the Jesuit college of the seventeenth century.

Standing behind Loyola, then, as her predecessors, are the customs of Athens, the traditions of Rome, the foundations of the Renaissance, and the best developments of modern institutions of learning. This is the heritage that is Loyola.

When the Jesuits began to found schools of their own, they inherited the best of the three types of school-education then in existence. These three types embodied the ideals of education that existed before the founding of the Society of Jesus. In studying and utilizing the best qualities of each of these types, the Jesuits were able to preserve the old traditions in their system of school-education.

The first type of education grew up in Greece during its best period, during the golden age of Pericles. Its aim was the development of the individual, with as large a completeness as was consistent with harmony and balance. Called a cultural education, it flourished until the rise of the Roman Empire and then gave way to the Roman principle in education. It was again revived with the Renaissance in the Fifteenth century.

For in the groves and market places of Athens some of the greatest minds ever known to a civilized world walked among youths, teaching them to live and to think. These men—Aristotle and Plato and their heirs—laid down the principles upon which we base much of our modern philosophy.

Institutions of Ancient Athens...

From the Schools

of Rome...

The second type of education was Roman, which was more narrowly practical than the Greek. It aimed at equipping the individual for a social task, or a small group of social tasks; to produce the orator, the administrator, the law-maker. It can be called a vocational education.

The principal influence of the Roman world of learning on Jesuit education was the Roman rhetorician Quintilian. Quintilian's use of class exercises, memory lessons, literary composition, and declamation has been preserved by the Jesuits in their type of school-education. The Jesuits' objective was the training of the fully developed Christian man, and they took Quintilian's Institutio Oratoria (The Training of the Orator) as the treasure-house from which they drew their pedagogical precepts.

The reason for the importance of Quintilian in the Jesuit system of education is that he was the interpreter of antiquity to the Renaissance, as Aquinas in his day had been the interpreter of Aristotle in the medieval schools. Not that one should picture the framers of the Ratio as gathered about a table examining Quintilian's treatise and appropriating large excerpts for their work. But Quintilian and his eloquentia were in the air; eloquentia was the cry of the intellectual world of that day, much as science is of ours. There was no school or university where Quintilian was not in vogue. This influence lasted long in Jesuit circles.

From the Medieval Universities

The third type of education was developed more particularly in the late Middle Ages and in the succeeding centuries. This, the medieval spirit, was a major influence along with that of Quintilian and other Roman educators on the framers of the Ratio Studiorum, the Jesuit code of liberal education. It was during this time that the world saw the rise of Scholasticism. And the Jesuits preserved and developed this Scholasticism, the greatest achievement of medieval education. The results of this preservation and development are evident in the Ratio which provides for a training in the classics, followed in the higher studies by courses in Scholastical philosophy and theology.

The Ratio Studiorum is essentially a harmonization of the old learning and the new.

To the Jesuit Institutions of Adopting as the basis of their system of school-education the cultural type first developed in Greece, the Jesuits infused it with the Christian spirit and set their members to the task of training boys and youths in a Catholic, liberal education.

However, with the expansion of modern opportunities in education, it was necessary to incorporate professional and research schools into the Jesuit system. Despite these developments, the Jesuits have not surrendered their traditional aim in education; they have made into a corporate whole the ordinarily diverse professional, research, and cultural schools.

Nevertheless, the Society of Jesus is still primarily devoted to the "balanced development of boys and youths into men who are cultured through training in the sciences, the humanities, and the Catholic religion." It values far more the men it produces than the possible success which they may achieve in research or the professions.

Scholarship is the result of the ability to learn and of a great desire for knowledge. It is the primary purpose of a university. An institution which has reasons other than the acquisition of knowledge as a primary motive of existence has no claim to the title of university.

At Loyola scholarship comes first. Athletics and extra-curricular activities are rewards for a high degree of scholarship and are not ends in themselves. Every motive for scholarship is provided. The campus is peopled by the best instructors. The classrooms are conducive to study.

The Cudahy Memorial Library consists of over 300,000 volumes. Special courses are presented for capable students, and awards are made each semester to students with a high scholastic standing.

Loyola, with its scholarship, deserves the name of university.

SCHOLARSHIP

In Book One is presented the University. Manifest here is the adherence of the Jesuits to their traditional aim, the balanced development of youths into men, who are cultured through training in the sciences, the humanities, and the Catholic religion.

CATHOLIC FELLOWSHIP

In Book Two is offered a record of how the students of Loyola utilize — under faculty supervision — their training and principles in social and practical life.

SPORTSMANSHIP

Book Three records the efforts of Loyolans in Athletics. Here we see that the aim of the Jesuits is to use athletic games for the physical and moral training of every student in the school, and not as the semi-professional occupation of a few experts.

PRESENTING FATHER WILSON

For nine years now, Loyola has had as her leader Father Samuel Knox Wilson, S.J. And for nine years she has progressed under his guidance. With a keen eye to the requirements of the rapidly changing world about him, and with the Christian principles guiding Jesuit education firmly fixed in his mind, he has skillfully directed, as president of the University, the progress of the lives of thousands.

Now especially are we fortunate in having Father Wilson as our president. These are trying times, and no one knows what the days to come will bring for the students of Loyola. But when we read the words with which Father Wilson in 1934 gave courage to the youth under his direction we feel something of the special capability which he possesses for just such times as these.

“My hope is that Loyola students will manifest a courageous daring in fidelity to ideals and loyalty to convictions. Thus daring, they cannot fail, for the only real failure is disloyalty to one’s better self.” The student body is proud to have Father Wilson as president because of such statements as that.

In his nine years as president, his outstanding career as a nationally known and respected educator has given the students of this University many opportunities for pride.

ADMINISTRATIVE COUNCIL

A Catholic institution, necessarily operated by men trained and fitted primarily for educational and religious instruction, can very easily encounter serious financial or legal problems. This is due, largely, to the wide difference between the cultural training of the religious and the mundane operations of the financial world. It is imperative, therefore, that laymen should be found who are capable of performing these duties with the ability so much needed for the successful operation of a large institution like Loyola University.

Thus, men prominent in legal circles, leaders in LaSalle Street, noted bankers and distinguished men of the industrial world were sought out and made members of the Administrative Council of the University. Though their work is accomplished without prominence or publicity, the duties which they carry out remain one of the most important tasks connected with the institution.

The Council is composed of a general chairman, a legal adviser, and three committees, each of which assumes a separate responsibility.

ACADEMIC COUNCIL

The purpose of the Academic Council is to achieve perfect unity of government, the essential of any university. It acts as the coordinating agency between the several divisions of the University. It was organized in 1928 under the presidency of the Reverend Robert M. Kelley, S.J., sixth president of Loyola University, and has since functioned with extraordinary success. The Council is composed of the President, all regents, deans, and assistant deans, and the general registrar of the University.

Its primary duty is to act as an advisory board to the president on those matters which concern the educational policies of two or more branches of the University considered as a whole. Included in this is the important duty of maintaining academic standards in the University so as to uphold the high standards required by the North Central Association and affiliates.

At regular meetings, presided over by Father Wilson, it considers important academic and student welfare problems. The spirit of cooperation in which the Council was founded has spread to the student body.

GRADUATE SCHOOL

In order to organize and supervise the Graduate courses that were offered in some of the schools of the University, The Graduate School of Loyola University was founded in 1926, by the Reverend William H. Agnew, S.J., then president of the University, and put under the direction of the Reverend Austin G. Schmidt, S.J. Prior to this time, graduate work of an academic character had been offered by several departments, but the increasing demand for advanced instruction necessitated a school having jurisdiction over Graduate degrees which were conferred by the University.

The purpose of the school is to develop scholars who are capable of working independently and who are spurred on by intellectual curiosity and a love of knowledge. They must be fully equipped to engage in research in their chosen subjects and be able to make in their theses scholarly contributions to the field of knowledge.

From the beginning, Graduate courses leading to the Master's degree in Education, Law, Medicine, Psychology, and Sociology were offered. In subsequent years there were added the Departments of History, 1929; English and Social Work, 1930; Mathematics, 1931; Economics and Philosophy, 1932; French, 1933; and Chemistry, 1934. In 1932 Graduate work in Law and the Master's degree in Law were dropped. In 1933 Master of Arts degree in Social work was substituted for the Master of Arts in Sociology.

The school offers four degrees. The Master of Arts degree is the traditional Graduate degree with centuries of our educational history in back of it. The Master of Science is neither as old nor as traditionally recognized as the Arts degree, but its prestige is now just as great. The degree of Doctor of Philosophy is intended to indicate advanced and detailed research. The newest degree offered by the Graduate School is the Master of Education.

DR. PAUL KINIERY
Assistant Dean of the Graduate School

It is the intention of the faculty of the Graduate School to perfect its course of instruction so as to attract students in the upper scholastic strata of Catholic and non-Catholic colleges and universities in the middle west. Already, Loyola University Graduate School boasts the finest Philosophy and History Departments among the Catholic universities in this area.

It will be the aim of the Graduate School in the future not merely to maintain its present high standards, but to promote even higher ones in all fields of academic endeavor. The Dean of the West Baden College of the University has the rank of Associate Dean of the Graduate School.

Although the Graduate School draws students from many fields, the greatest percentage by far comes from the teaching profession. A large number of teachers in both the public and private schools of Chicago have completed their graduate work at Loyola.

Life on the Lake Shore Campus was catapulted into existence with the advent of the Freshmen caps the second week of school. Featuring an unusually stubborn Freshmen class the long weeks of attempted discipline by the Sophomores was finally climaxed in the pushball contest on Hallowe'en which the Freshmen won by 22 yards on a muddy field.

The traditional round of dances began with the Freshmen Welcome Dance, sponsored by the Arts Council, and the all-University Pow-Wow sponsored by the Loyola Union, on the second and third weekends of the school year. The Monogram Club sponsored its first dance in the Gym, on Oct. 17. The University Club's Harvest Hop on Halloween following the Pushball Contest was again acclaimed the most successful Gym dance of the year. The quota of Gym dances more than filled, the Alpha Delta Gamma fraternity again took us to the 666 Club, Gardiner Benedict's Orchestra, for a successful Thanksgiving Eve Formal. The one and only Pi Alpha Lambda Christmas Formal, traditionally a financial and social success lived up to its reputation on the last school day before the Christmas holidays at the Belden-Stratford Hotel with Earl Frederick's Orchestra providing the music. The Junior Prom came right after the holidays and quickly followed by the first annual University Club Winter Formal.

Swinging back to events other than dances, Bill Graydon was elected Senior class president after Bob Carroll left school. Very early in the year a "Know Your Navy" speaker's bureau, composed of six Loyola men spoke before different groups presenting hitherto unknown facts about the navy. The mock funeral for Raven Sherman, comic strip character, late in October caused nationwide comment and is another evidence of school "life" other than studies at Loyola. The International Relations Club members attended the Catholic Activity for International Peace Conference held at Mundelein Nov. 1st. Things perked up along about mid-semester time when the fraternities again vied for the cream of the freshmen class. Keeping alive the "never a dull moment at Loyola" movement, Walt Delaney, president of the Student Council, started a "most ugly photo" contest, charging ten cents per entry and awarding the one judged to have taken the worst picture for his student pass with five dollars; the best picture also won five dollars.

The declaration of war on December 8, the most stirring event for anyone in 1941, affected the students at Loyola considerably. This effect was forcibly brought home to them not only by the number of students leaving for the armed services but by the V-5 and V-7 courses offered by the Navy to permit Juniors and Seniors to finish school.

The intellectual side of Loyola was not neglected. Two talks in successive weeks at Gym assemblies by Fr. Gardiner, S.J., literary editor of America, and Dr. Wilhelm Solzbacher, formerly from the University of Cologne, respectively, interested the students greatly. Sheldon Hayes won the Harrison Oratorical Contest. The middle of December saw a merging of the Wasmann Society and the Biology Club. The Pageant of Peace, "the Nativity in Song," was presented by the Glee Club, and it was the most impressive affair of the year.

The annual three-day retreat followed the semester examinations as usual. Well conducted by Fr. Ford, S.J., the retreat gave the students a chance to put aside the hectic worries of everyday life and give some thought to their spiritual life. Because of the war, the second semester started off with a rather stern aspect. Besides the increased load of studies placed on the shoulders of students enrolled in the V-5 and V-7 navy courses, a rigorous program of physical training was made compulsory for all students. It was announced that the quarter system would go into effect beginning in the summer.

LAKE SHORE CAMPUS

However, the social calendar was not interrupted, the various fraternities conducting their initiations early in the semester. The first dance was a tea dance sponsored by the Alpha Delts at the Congress Hotel. The annual Loyalty Week, conducted by the Green Circle, not preceding a basketball game as in previous years, but specifically to encourage attendance at the Musical Show, On the Road, was the first of its kind at Loyola. The general purpose, of course, was to encourage school spirit at Loyola.

On the Road, the First Annual Musical Show, was by far the biggest event at Loyola this year. It was held for three days, Friday, Feb. 13th to Feb. 15th. Courageously promoted by Robert Burns and Robert Schiavone against overwhelming obstacles, the first all-University, first all-student-conducted, first musical revue ever held at this school was pronounced a lavish success. A huge cast of about sixty in number was gathered from the extremities of the city and was a further indication of the "Roberts' Enterprises" remarkable feat.

To show Loyola's willingness to help the war effort, a Defense Bond booth was set up in the Cudahy basement, selling defense stamps to the students. Another tea dance, but on a grander scale was held on March 15th, the Green Tea Ball, at the Stevens Hotel in the Boulevard Room. This initial all-organization affair was sponsored by the following groups: Pi Alpha Lambda, the Green Circle, Phi Mu Chi, Sigma Pi Alpha, the Monogram Club, Alpha Delta Gamma and the University Club. The Intramural Board's Carnival of Champions held March 27 was again a huge success. After a strenuous campaign in the weeks preceding this event finalists were picked from Rosary College and Mundelein College, and one queen was picked from each school at the Carnival. The main purpose of the evening was pitting the intramural champions against Navy Pier sailors in boxing, wrestling, pool, handball, bowling, pingpong and other sports. It was climaxed in a rat race among the four fraternal organizations and finally a waterpolo match in which the Pi Alphas defeated the All-Stars.

After Lent, until the semester's end, May 31, the social calendar was well-filled. The Phi Mu Chi Easter Dance, the Senior Ball, the Sophomore Cotillion, the Spanish Club dance, the Alpha Delta Formal were climaxed by the traditional Pi Alpha Lambda Summer Formal on May 29.

SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

The Loyola University School of Medicine became an integral part of Loyola University in 1915 upon the purchase by the University of Bennett College, which had been established in 1868. In 1917, the Chicago College of Medicine and Surgery was also acquired by the university. The physical facilities were improved and teaching in the basic sciences was given over to full-time faculty personnel, each member of which specialized in his particular field.

Preclinical studies are conducted in the laboratory building at 706 South Wolcott Avenue, which is equipped with a library, museums, laboratories, and offices of administration for the teaching staff. Clinical studies are conducted principally at Mercy Hospital, Cook County Hospital, and in the affiliated and public hospitals. The teaching at Mercy Hospital is under the direct control of the closed staff, all members of the faculty of the Loyola University School of Medicine. In the affiliated institutions, teaching is under the direct supervision of members of the staffs who are members of the Medical School faculty.

In March of 1941 Dr. Francis J. Braceland was appointed dean of the School of Medicine to succeed Dr. Louis B. Moorhead. Dr. Braceland is a graduate of LaSalle College, Philadelphia, and received his M.D. degree in 1930 from Jefferson Medical College. After the completion of his medical course he became resident physician in the Jefferson Medical College Hospital and served in that capacity for two years. He is, at present Assistant

In training properly qualified applicants for the practice of medicine, the Loyola University School of Medicine strives to retain the intellectual atmosphere that is contributive to the preservation of faith and morals by remaining dominantly Catholic in spirit. Personal attention is given by the faculty to students in regard to their scholarship, character, habits of work, rest, and recreation.

Under the chairmanship of Dr. Earl E. Kleinschmidt, the activities of the Department of Public Health, Preventative Medicine, and Bacteriology have been extended into fields of Public Health, Nursing, and advanced courses for properly qualified students leading to graduate degrees in Public Health Administration and Education. There are over 110 students enrolled in these special fields. Besides the heavy schedule, the department continues to maintain courses in Public Health and Bacteriology in the Medical curriculum.

Loyola Medical School is recognized as an approved medical school by the Committee on Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association, and is a member of the Association of American Medical Colleges.

The school added its Dispensary, now an integral part of the institution, in 1935. The twofold purpose of founding the Dispensary was to afford increased clinical experience for the medical students and to provide a larger field for medical charitable work by the University among the indigent sick of the Archdiocese. The attending staffs are selected from the general clinical faculty of the Medical school, the men of high rank and long experience acting as supervisors of the various clinical divisions. Younger clinical men serve under the Senior attending men as associates. This Dispensary provides complete facilities for the diagnosis and management of all clinical conditions in the ambulant sick. Junior students are assigned to the Dispensary for one quarter and are given the advantage of a complete rotating system. Deserving patients are admitted free, regardless of race, color, or creed. A Social Service Department determines a patient's fitness for admission and provides all adjunct work necessary in the case.

MEDICAL SCHOOL

UNDERGRADUATES

The curriculum of the Loyola University School of Medicine is designed to realize the objectives of the school in conformity with the latest trends in medical education. The program of studies attempts to provide an undergraduate plan of instruction which will insure the highest measure of clinical contacts and so fit the student for the general practice of medicine. At the same time it is sufficiently specialized to enable properly qualified students to lay the foundation for practice of medical specialties.

The activities of the School of Medicine are largely restricted to technical fields. The three honorary fraternities, the Moorhead Surgical Seminar, The Volini Medical Society, and Lambda Rho, spend most of their time as a group in hearing papers read on the various fields of medicine. The School of Medicine places special emphasis on close contact between faculty and the students.

Last year was marked by the establishment of the Student Council. This Student Council, under the guidance of Father Maher, has proved a most stimulating influence on student thought and action. The Council sponsored the annual Student-Faculty Alumni Dance which it instituted last year and found highly successful. The Council also sponsored a group Mass and Communion morning on Ash Wednesday. Student participation in this religious exercise was inspiring. Similar Mass and Communion mornings were held each quarter of the academic year. The Council also assists Father Maher as much as possible in the conduct of the student retreat, and will be the host to the retreatants at the Communion breakfast at the close of the retreat.

From classroom to actual practice in the operating theater is the technique of the medical school courses. Much actual practice in the clinical work is given to those who have completed several full years of study. Laboratory work absorbs a large part of any medical student's time. Cooperation between students is an essential in laboratory work. Practical experience in a well-equipped laboratory brings out many of the unrevealed sides of textbook study and classroom work.

So that they may obtain practical knowledge of the application of their classroom and laboratory principles, medical students are sent to the various hospitals of the city. Also before they enter internship they are given practice and help to develop bedside manners which are so important to a doctor.

The school is not without its social events. The major fraternities have several dances throughout the year which are well attended. Medical students also enjoy the all-University dances sponsored by the Loyola Union.

SCHOOL OF LAW

In 1908 the alumni of Saint Ignatius College encouraged the founding of the Lincoln College of Law; this institution was then shortly thereafter accepted as a part of the University. The Law School was the first of the professional units to be added to the institution. Later the medical and dental schools, and other units followed.

The first dean of the Law School was William Dillon, a product of the Catholic University and King's Inn, Dublin, and the Middle Temple, London, who died in 1935. His term as dean ran from 1908 to 1915. At the close of his term he retired to private practice. Among his other accomplishments can be included nine years as editor of The New World.

Dean Dillon was succeeded in 1915 by Arnold D. McMahon, who had served as registrar prior to his appointment. McMahon remained in that position until 1925, when Judge John V. McCormick became dean. John C. Fitzgerald, the present dean, took office in 1938. He was a graduate of the Harvard Law School, and had been an instructor in the school for nine years previous to this time.

The school is located at 28 North Franklin Street, which quarters it took up in 1927. Here the school is within easy access of the federal, state, county, and city courts. Before 1927 the classes were held in the Ashland Block.

A library of over thirteen thousand volumes of Anglo-American law, consists of reported cases, selected and annotated cases, digests, statutes, and textbooks. Such a library, scientifically arranged, is an absolute necessity in the modern law school. The work in the school is carried on in both Day and Evening divisions. The character of the instruction and the content of the courses are substantially the same. In general, the courses in the Day and Evening divisions are conducted by the same instructors. Some of the prominent faculty members are Sherman Steele, John C. Hayes, John J. Waldron, and James A. S. Howell. Mr. Francis J. Rooney is the assistant dean of the School of Law.

The final product of the Loyola University School of Law is a well-rounded person, trained in the Catholic principles and prepared to apply them in his future work. A survey of the graduate would show him to possess, to a large extent, a broad outlook on life and a realization of the trust which he holds as a graduate of a Catholic school. The true philosophic principles underlying jurisprudence have been stressed during the time he has attended Loyola, not in a direct and annoying way, but in a continuous application to the cases considered in the classes.

The character of the future lawyer is molded in this manner so that his philosophy will be an integral part of him, and not merely an added attraction. On this solid foundation the instructors can build a trustworthy and competent personality. In this way the lawyer graduated from Loyola enters his practice with a Christian outlook on life and with a true sense of values from which he can raise the edifice of his professional career. Courses in scholastic jurisprudence and legal ethics comprise the formal method of imparting this training, and the principles of these subjects are constantly inculcated in the student.

For the past two years the students have all been under the combined examination system. The seniors alone take separate examinations and these only for the finals. This combined system gives the student a series of questions fashioned after the bar examination.

SCHOOL OF COMMERCE

The School of Commerce was added to the list of colleges of Loyola University in the fall of 1924. The Reverend William H. Agnew, S.J., then president of the University, acted as first regent, while Mr. Thomas J. Reedy was the first dean of the school. Mr. Reedy served in that capacity from the date of the founding of the school until 1931. During that time the school established itself as an educational force in the life of the city of Chicago. In 1931 Mr. Henry Chamberlain was appointed dean of the School of Commerce, and has held that position until the present time.

In the first class, held in the Ashland Block, there were eighty-five students enrolled, fifteen of which were coeds. The active faculty numbered seven. In the past eighteen years the school has expanded and gone into new quarters at 28 North Franklin Street. Now it is recognized as one of the most outstanding institutions of its type in this section of the country. Loyola graduates have achieved an enviable record in the Illinois Certified Public Accountant Examinations in the past few years, sometimes taking over seventy-five percent of the total list of successful candidates. A recent graduate of Loyola's commerce department enjoyed the unique distinction of having his paper judged as the best in the entire United States.

The School of Commerce is divided into two sections. The night section meets in the downtown college, while the Day Commerce School conducts classes on the Lake Shore Campus. This sectioning gives a student the opportunity to decide between acquiring his education while pursuing a business career or while enjoying the ordinary atmosphere of college life on the Lake Shore Campus.

The school offers the academic degree of Bachelor of Science in Commerce in cooperation with the University College. This degree is conferred upon those who earned recognition not only as men trained in commerce, but also as those with a broad cultural background. The degree of Master of Business Administration is also conferred upon the completion of a fifth year of study in the School of Commerce. New courses are constantly being added to the curriculum to keep the standards of the school high in the esteem of business educators.

College men would find business men far more eager to employ them if they knew how to work before they entered on their careers. That Loyola has realized this deficiency of the average college graduate and endeavored to correct it by not only teaching principles but their application as well, is evidenced by the methods of instruction, and by the type of instructors which she employs and seeks.

The increased enthusiasm created by the student body since 1930 has resulted in the establishment of group clubs which conduct extemporaneous meetings, providing unequalled interest to those whose daily tasks take them to the threshold of the field of Commerce. Sigma Lambda Beta fraternity, whose members have been numbered among the students of the School of Commerce, deserve considerable praise for weaving the members of the School of Commerce into a unified body.

For the past several years this fraternal organization has provided speakers to address the students at smokers and has in this way created a spirit of fellowship that will outlive their life in the University. The work of the Loyola Union, even though it is not a School of Commerce organization itself, must be complimented for its efforts in unifying the different schools of the University. On the Lake Shore Campus the activities are carried on in a somewhat different manner, being mostly embodied in one organization, the Commerce Club. This organization holds periodic meetings and discusses current developments in the business world.

Probably one of the better, if not the best, advantages offered the layman in a school of commerce conducted by skilled business leaders and professors of local renown under the guidance of a Catholic university is the special training in the philosophical and moral values of modern business that are so lacking in the materialistic business world that we know. Besides a complete training in the technical methods of his profession, there is needed a Christian philosophy of life and business conduct to guide a man in commerce and industry.

*F*ACULTY AND UNDERGRADUATES

The faculty of the School of Commerce has been selected from men of all walks of life, whose duties have taken them to many varied enterprises. It is one of the few schools of the University whose faculty body is made up of professional men. Lawyers, accountants, financiers, are all numbered among the numerous faculty of the Commerce School. These men are able to give practical, as well as theoretical, examples and experiences in conducting and supervising their particular classes.

The student body of this division of the University is probably more diversified than its faculty. Many creeds, races, and industries are represented on the class rolls. The student in this school has the opportunity of learning almost as much from conversation with his fellow students as he does in his class work. Each succeeding year has seen the Commerce School increase in student enrollment, become stronger in unity and farther advanced and experienced in education. It will continue to seek after high levels as increased activity impresses upon the minds of the business world the necessity of higher education.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

The University College division of Loyola University offers a curriculum leading to Baccalaureate degrees for students who would otherwise not be able to attend college. The University College operates in the afternoon and evening. It was established for the convenience of those who are not able to attend class during the day, but who are willing to sacrifice part of their evenings to education.

The classes of the college are so arranged that students who devote full time to their studies may obtain the regular academic degree in four years. The members of the faculty teach in this division and with but few exceptions are also teaching on the Lake Shore Campus.

Situated near the loop, the University College affords excellent opportunities to people in all occupations. It is the out-growth of the University effort towards adult and extension education.

Due to the lack of free time which the students have at their command, extracurricular activities at the University College do not reach the proportions of those in the Lake Shore Campus, yet are by no means to be overlooked. The Madonna Della Strada Sodality holds regular meetings and the members sponsor an annual retreat. The Service Guild formed of students in the school and members of the Alumna Association sponsors a series of lectures every year, the proceeds of which are used to help poor children.

The students of the University College are members of the Glee Club, take part in dramatics, and are eligible for membership in sororities and fraternities. They also contribute to the University's publications.

The University College was founded in 1914. Its history has been that of constant expansion and growth. The greatest obstacle to future development is cramped quarters.

WEST BADEN

West Baden College is academically a unit of Loyola University. The building and grounds it occupies were once the world-famed West Baden Springs Hotel. Mr. Charles Edward Ballard gave his famous hotel to the Society of Jesus in 1934 to be used as a house of studies.

Here the young men engaged in the long courses of Jesuit training preparatory to their future work in education and the sacred ministry devote three years to a unique, thorough course of Philosophy. Philosophy is the principal subject of study of the young Jesuit at West Baden, but other branches of education are not neglected. Biology, chemistry, physics, and mathematics give the necessary scientific background for the philosophical studies. Many of the young Jesuit scholastics have already obtained the Bachelor of Arts degree from Loyola University and are enrolled in the graduate school. Special courses are also offered in English, History, the Classics, Speech, and Education.

The Reverend Thomas J. Donnelly, S.J. was appointed Rector of the College the year it was founded, which position he still holds. During the first five years of its existence, the college was used only as a philosophate, but in 1939 with the beginning of the sixth year a theology faculty was introduced and the first year of theology was taught at West Baden. By 1942 all four years of theology will be taught there.

Chief among the extracurricular activities is the Sodality which is divided into several groups. The Mission Circle studies mission theory and the biographies of famous Jesuit missionaries as well as acting as a patron of the Patna Mission Stamp Mart. Catholic newspaper style and propaganda methods were among the subjects inquired into by the journalistic group.

This year the dramatic guild presented T. S. Eliot's play in three acts entitled "Murder in the Cathedral."

SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK

In 1914, the late Reverend Frederick Siedenburg, S. J., organized the Department of Sociology for the express purpose of introducing into Catholic colleges a sociology founded on Catholic principles. Father Siedenburg was first Dean of the School of Social Work and held office from 1914 to 1932. Since that time the separate professional School of Social Work has developed under the deanship of the Reverend Elmer A. Barton, S.J. In keeping with the Jesuit ideals, it teaches not only the necessary theory and practice, but it also imparts the fundamental principles of philosophy and ethics. It is today one of the 38 schools comprising the American Association of Schools of Social Work, and is the oldest of the six Catholic schools of its kind in the country.

During the quarter century of its existence, the school has fought to equip young men and women for their all-important services to society. It is the contention of most observers of politic, economic and social affairs that the scope of governmental legislation with regard to social welfare will continue to widen indefinitely. In recent years, the disorganized methods of the government in its attempt to administer relief to the financially embarrassed "bread liners" has shown that there is a genuine need for skilled social workers and social problem analysis in the field of public welfare. Hence, it is because Loyola has recognized the vast opportunities for trained men and women in the field of public welfare administration that the University has endeavored to maintain the standards of the School of Social Work commensurate with those of similar schools in the United States.

Loyola School of Social Work is a nationally recognized institution. Whatever the future of the field of Social Work in this country, at least from a broad Christian point of view it is needless to say that Loyola University will be ready and willing to serve at any time. In the School of Social Work men and women are taught to instill Catholic ideals and Catholic principles in the minds of men, women, boys, and girls who would otherwise be led into a criminal or aimless life. The School of Social Work is an institution equipped to teach any course which will aid men and women to engage in social work.

ELIZABETH E. LLOYD

DOCTOR ROMAN L. HAREMSKI

In our present day of economic crisis, the poor and depressed are in greater need of help than ever. Owing to the fact that the forces which cause this strife are so tightly woven, highly organized men are needed to devote their lives toward the relieving of these various conditions. Today crime is one of the greatest deterring factors in the advancement of the American youth. Criminals are trained by other criminals; from childhood they are taught, by influence and association, to look upon the world with the eyes of a criminal. This condition must be relieved, and it must be relieved by men and women who know the sources and the ways of the evils and agencies which cause it. Therefore, the training of people in Social Work is a crying necessity. It was for this purpose the Loyola School of Social Work was organized.

SCHOOLS OF NURSING

The Schools of Nursing of Loyola University were completely united with the University in 1935-36. Prior to this time the five hospitals were affiliated to the University, each operating under a different curriculum and possessing no direct connection with one another. This system was completely lacking in unity, and so Sister Helen Jarrell and the Reverend Terence H. Ahearn, S.J., Regent of the School of Medicine, early in 1935 launched a project for closer unification and coordination of those five hospitals with Loyola. In August of 1936 the sixth and last hospital was added to the enrollment.

Thus through this unification a mutual advantage has resulted for the hospitals and for Loyola. The Nursing Schools realize the benefits of affiliation with one of the outstanding institutions of the Middle West, and the University finds itself in a position to offer a Catholic nursing education of the highest quality to young women. Beginning last year, five-year courses in Nursing were inaugurated leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science in Nursing. This new revision is another indication of the progress which the Loyola Nursing unit has been making.

One of the best known of Catholic hospitals in the Chicago area, St. Bernard's has stood for over 39 years for all that is progress and efficiency in the field of medicine. The Religious Hospitallers of St. Joseph have conducted this institution since its founding in 1903, and were the first to affiliate their nursing unit with Loyola in her great project of organizing education in this field. The residence of the over one-hundred student nurses is situated directly across from the hospital itself, but is connected to it by a subterranean tunnel. The nurses' home contains a chapel, library, spacious auditorium, classrooms and laboratories. Among the activities of the school are a three-day retreat, the Candle-Lighting service at Christmas, the May Queen coronation, Freshman welcome party, and the Senior Ball. Besides these events, the nurses enjoy motion pictures, dances, picnics, sleigh ride parties. Likewise, equally looked forward to are the Junior-Senior dinner and the Senior Picnic at which the graduating class is the guest of the Alumnae association.

ST. ELIZABETH'S

Oldest in the date of founding, St. Elizabeth's hospital is also one of the largest of the six hospitals in the affiliated system. Founded in 1886 the old building still remains in contrast to the modern structure erected a few years ago. The School of Nursing conducted by the Poor Handmaids of Jesus Christ, was established at St. Elizabeth's in 1914 and became affiliated with the University in 1929. With the capacity of 325, it provides service in every branch of the medical profession. Each department is under the supervision of a highly qualified instructor. Thus with a well-coordinated system to regulate the arduous task of serving the public throughout the entire year, the hospital unit together with its accompanying nursing school has received the highest praise from the medical profession. The social activities include a variety of dances, Frosh welcome party, the Christmas party with its exchange of gifts, and as the climax of the season, the Senior Ball.

COLUMBUS

Located across from Chicago's beautiful Lincoln Park, Columbus Hospital has long been praised for the excellent training it gives its student nurses. The hospital was opened in 1905 under the direction of the Reverend Mother Francis Xavier Cabrini, the venerable foundress of the order of the Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart. The Nursing School unit, opened in 1906 was affiliated with Loyola University in 1930. Two well-furnished classrooms for lecturing and demonstrating are accompanied by a laboratory for teaching in chemistry and laboratory technique, and another laboratory for practical experience in cookery. A well-equipped library containing volumes and periodicals on almost every phase of medicine and nursing is available for the use of the students. Recreation is provided through the facilities of the near-by park, and a number of social functions are held each year to lighten the burden of scholastic pursuit. The program of education at Columbus follows along the same lines as those as the other nursing units of the University.

ST. ANNE'S

Thirty years ago a definite need for a hospital was presented to the West Side of Chicago. The rapid expansion of the city westward made this vital to the well-being of the district. To satisfy this need St. Anne's hospital, originally organized as an auxiliary to St. Elizabeth's hospital to care for tuberculosis patients, was chartered as a separate unit in 1908. The nursing school was opened in 1913. Since its institution thousands of young women have been trained in the work of carrying mercy to the sick. Among the traditional social functions of the past school year were the Halloween party sponsored by the Junior class, the Senior Ball, the Junior Prom. On Christmas day the annual singing of carols to the patients took place. This was preceded by the capping services and the three-day retreat.

OAK PARK

The Oak Park School of Nursing came under the direction of the Sisters of Misericorde in 1917 and became affiliated with Loyola in 1933, when it became one of Loyola's nursing units. The round of activities at the school is quite complete and well organized. As in past years the new group of pre-clinical students entertained the upper classmen and graduates at an evening gathering in September. The October dance proved to be a successful affair both financially and socially. In December, the Glee Club under the direction of Mrs. Margaret Conway presented a program followed by the dramatic club's presentation of a Christmas play. The Christmas party itself and the singing of carols by the nurses, both traditional activities, closed the year. The annual three-day retreat was held in March. The final school dance was given by the Seniors and the social climax of the year was attained by the Union Senior Ball.

ST. FRANCIS

The St. Francis School of Nursing is the northernmost of the Loyola affiliated units and is one of the largest institutions in the Chicago area. It has a bed capacity of 320 and is attended by a medical staff of 76 members and a visiting staff of about 50 other doctors. The nurses residence has a spacious lounge and reception rooms, together with a solarium on each floor. The educational unit consists of a large lecture room, demonstration room, and laboratories for dietetics and the biological sciences. The Freshmen were welcomed at an outdoor party in September. The Junior and Senior groups holding a number of informal parties throughout the year, but the crowning social effort is the annual spring formal which is, in effect, a final gesture of the Seniors to their fellow students and their school. The capping and Candle-Lighting ceremony takes place four months after the admission of Freshmen to the school. The spiritual exercises consist of an annual retreat, membership in the sodality, the crowning of the Blessed Virgin by a student selected as May Queen.

STUDENT HONORS

Following closely the Jesuit plan of studies, Ratio Studiorum, three years ago the Reverend William A. Finnegan, S.J., dean of the College of Arts and sciences instituted the Honors program at Loyola. The Honors program is a well-integrated study course offered to exceptional students who are allowed outside activities in their particular field of study. Each department offers a curriculum in this course, and the student follows the study of his particular field of concentration privately, holding periodic sessions with his advisor, who is usually the chairman of the department. In addition to these studies, the student takes certain courses dealing with the cultural developments throughout the history of the world.

Other honors after which students on Loyola's campus seek are the Inter-collegiate Essay contest and the John P. Morrissey, S.J., medals for chemistry. These latter are awarded on a basis of the highest average attained by a student in his particular class of chemistry.

Carter, Bowman, MacManamon, and Homan were among the participants in the Honors Program this year.

THE CLASS OF 1942

To the Class of 1942 we say: Loyola's graduates have been leaders. Many well-known men have been the products of the Jesuit training, either at old St. Ignatius or at the present University. They have fulfilled that function for which the Jesuits have ever striven, namely: to provide the world with Catholic leadership. Within but a few short weeks after the publication of this volume you, whose names are listed in the succeeding pages, will join that ever-increasing army of Loyola Alumni. From this period on you enter spheres of influence of which your long period of preparation has been in anticipation. Some of you will fall by the wayside, but most will remain true to the ideals which have been inculcated in you. It is necessary for each one of you, graduates of Loyola, to remember that at the bottom of the "Loyolan's Code of Honor" are these words, "Loyola's greatest pride must be her graduates." If you do remember, Loyola will have justified her existence by producing the highest type of Catholic leaders.

FELLOWSHIP

SODALITY OF OUR LADY

The Sodality started out the year completely reorganized and with a new policy. Its members were hand picked and devoted to the duty of maintaining the Catholic spirit of the campus. Membership was by invitation only and became a matter of pride on the campus.

On the first Friday of each month, the Sodalists gathered in the chapel to pay tribute to their patroness with the Little Office of the Blessed Virgin. The second Friday of the month was set aside for a business meeting. The third Friday was devoted to discussion designed for Catholic leaders and the last Friday was again turned over to Sodality business.

Among the more noteworthy Sodality accomplishments for the year were a drive to increase Friday morning communions, a successful Missa Recitata at Friday Mass, a Christmas drive, the results of which were food for Chicago's needy and a sizable check for the missions, and a campaign to promote communication between the students and former Loyolans now in the service.

Throughout the year Loyola Sodalists were active in Cisca, one of the members, Charles O'Reilly, holding the office of president in that organization. The Sodality officers were: Prefect, Frank McGarr, Secretary, Kenneth Hayes, and Treasurer, James Lyons.

The highlight of the Sodality's social year was the induction of new members. Forty new members were picked from among the many applicants and were solemnly inducted at a Holy Hour in the Madonna Della Strada Chapel. The Mundelein Sodality members were in attendance and after the ceremony, all attended a dinner and a dance in the gym.

The Sodality members were the guests of the nurses at socials held in St. Francis and St. Ann's Hospitals, and the Sodality occupied a place of honor in the Cisca Eucharistic Procession. One of the most successful functions was that in which the Sodalists received communion in a body and had breakfast and discussion together in the gym.

WEST BADEN COLLEGE SODALITY

Diehl, Siegfried, Keating,
Liston, Wood, Saxton

The Sodality of West Baden College is of primary importance among the extra-curricular activities. In a Jesuit scholastic school this is as it should be. The last year marked a continued emphasis on general sodality activity.

Inasmuch as the goal of the sodality of West Baden is to prepare future moderators, a complete comprehension of organization is foremost. Consequently, the nature, methods, history, and rules of the sodality are studied. Such topics as what is the sodality, and what is its function in the Catholic college and high school receive special consideration.

Within the sodality only two individual groups function. They are the Mission Group and the Creative Writing Group. The Mission Group undertook a survey of all the Jesuit Missions, and examined the work of all Catholic Missions, watching in particular their methods and requirements. The Creative Writing Group, as its name implies, devoted itself to individual efforts at original writing with a marked degree of success.

MADONNA DELLA STRADA

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE SODALITY

Scene at the bi-monthly meeting of the Madonna Della Strada Sodality, when members meet for Mass, Communion, and Sodality meeting.

The Madonna Della Strada Sodality is a group of Catholic women attending the University College division of the University. These women have banded themselves together into a sodality, under the moderatorship of the Reverend Thomas A. Egan, S.J. Every other month, the members meet for Mass, Communion, Sodality recital, instruction, breakfast, and business meeting on the Lake Shore Campus. In the alternate months the office, benediction, and tea on Sunday afternoon constitute the meetings.

In an effort to promulgate Catholic Action the Sodalists engage in many activities designed with this in mind. Members collect periodicals with a high spiritual content and distribute them in many Chicago hospitals. They give unstinted support to such worthy causes as the Jesuit missions in Patna, India, and the poor children of Chicago.

A commendable climax to each year's effort is the day of recollection, conducted by Father Egan on Passion Sunday.

LOYOLA UNION

The Loyola Union is the student governing body of the University. Its Constitution gives it jurisdiction over all other student organizations except fraternities.

Early in the year its president, Richard Delaney, began work on the problem of bringing a greater feeling of unity and harmony among the various divisions of the University. When he left school in December to enlist in the Navy Air Corps, Delaney was succeeded by Donald Skinger, Night Commerce Senior, who had served under him as vice-president. The work which Delaney had begun was continued by Skinger with notable success.

Daniel Howe, Arts Senior, was vice-president of the group; Rosamund Toner, University College, is secretary; and Jack Hough, Arts Junior was treasurer. The Reverend Edward F. Maher, S.J., was moderator of the group.

ARTS COUNCIL

The election of officers for the Arts Student Council set a new record in balloting, Walter J. J. Delaney was elected president, and William Riley, secretary.

The freshman welcome dance was the first event on the card sponsored by the Council. The pushball contest, successful as usual, came in November. With the coming of war it sponsored a drive to promote the sale of defense bonds and stamps.

During the year, too, the Council bought a new radio-photograph for the Student Lounge. Towards the end of the second semester a banquet was held to honor all the athletic teams of the University, and two very successful tea dances were held with Mundelein college.

HARRISON ORATORY CONTEST

The Harrison Oratorical Contest, the oldest forensic event at Loyola, originated at old St. Ignatius College. The competition has for its purpose to find out or determine the best student orator in the university and to afford all students an opportunity to gain some practical experience in public speaking.

Sheldon W. Hayes, Arts freshman, won this year's competition with his presentation of the topic Aid to Britain, Russia and China. The fact that the contest was held on December 8, the day following the Pearl Harbor attack, added to the effectiveness and timeliness of Hayes' subject.

Second place was awarded to James Kiley, Arts junior. John Clifford and William Weldon, Arts senior and sophomore respectively, were the other two finalists who survived the elimination trials. Dr. John D. McKian, instructor in the philosophy department, judged the contest.

Debating at Loyola in the 1941-1942 school year was carried on in the high manner which typified it in previous seasons. More major tournaments and competitions were introduced, and debating assumed a more important role in extra-curricular activities.

In the first major tournament of the year, Don O'Brien, Don Murray, Bill Murray, and Jim Mulvaney represented Loyola. The tournament was held at the Iowa State Teachers' College last November.

The varsity debating society also sent two teams to the Northwest Invitational Tournament held at St. Thomas College in St. Paul, Minnesota. This trip has been an annual event for Loyola teams for some time.

March 13 and 14 the debaters participated in the Illinois State Debate League tournament, which was held this year at MacMurray College. In rounding out one of its most successful seasons the varsity sent two teams to compete in the Delta Sigma Rho tournament at the University of Wisconsin. "Resolved that the Federal Government should regulate by law all labor unions" was the subject debated during the year.

DEBATING

The debating organizations at Loyola in the past eight years have continued to carry out the policy that was inaugurated in 1933, which provided for a Loyola University Debating Society, composed of members of the upper classes, and the Cudahy Debating Forum, which is restricted to men from the freshman class. This policy has made debating at Loyola more a matter of personal achievement than a matter of winning debates.

As a result of this adoption of the personal achievement method, the general quality of the Loyola debating squads has been greatly improved over this period. The men, interested in their own abilities first, enhance the squad by becoming individually better. To encourage this individual forensic ability the Harrison Oratorical Contest, and the John Naughten Debate Contest were introduced, and have had remarkable results. The interest in these contests, as well as the interest in the progress of the debating squads manifested by the entire school, shows the result of all of this debate activity.

CUDAHY FORUM

Loyola's freshman debate group, the Cudahy Forum, now in its seventh year, has for its purpose the acclimating of high school debaters to the technique of intercollegiate debating. The organization, now under the guidance of Mr. Fred Brandstrader of the speech department, is an offshoot of the senior debate group. The Forum was initiated in 1935 by Mr. J. Raymond Sheriff of the English department.

Like the senior debaters the junior group considered the annual Pi Kappa Delta question, and so gained the necessary experience to equip its members for participation with the varsity squad within the next few years.

Squads from the Forum engaged in the Huntington tournament at Manchester College, the North Park College tourney, and in numerous exhibition debates before Holy Name groups.

Among the more active members of this year's undergraduate group were Clare Acton, Gerard Joyce, Sheldon Hayes, Emmet Bailey, Jack Hassel, Larry Hickey and Harold Kimball.

THE BELLARMINE SOCIETY

First Row — Fr. McCormick, S.J., Joyce, Cullen, Fr. Wellmuth, S.J.

The Bellarmine Society undertook this year the most ambitious program yet attempted in its long history at Loyola. Under the President, William R. Joyce, and the other officers, Stuart Cullen and Noel Lenihan, the society sponsored a testimonial banquet for the chairman of the department of philosophy, the Reverend John F. McCormick S.J., Ph.D., LL.D. upon the celebration of his golden jubilee in the Society of Jesus.

The regular schedule for the year comprised of lectures being given by the undergraduates of the college. These were in the form of papers given before an audience composed of faculty members and students. They concerned themselves with important metaphysical problems. A discussion of the papers then followed, with both faculty members and undergraduates contributing to the erudition of the evening.

Plans have been formulated for the beginning of a series of annual lectures to be given by visiting professors of note. These will be known as The Bellarmine Lectures. They will be given on the Sunday closest to the feast day of the patron saint of the society, St. Robert Bellarmine.

ON THE ROAD

Scenes from Loyola's first musical show staged in the Loyola Community Theater in February.

February 13, 14, and 15 were made memorable in Loyola history by the presentation of Loyola's first musical show, "ON THE ROAD." Producers Robert Schiavone and Robert Burns played host to enthusiastic audiences who came to the Loyola Community Theatre to witness the premier performances of an original and thoroughly entertaining student revue written, staged, acted, and directed entirely by students in the various schools of the University.

Jack Greene as Jeeter Bugg, the wandering dancing master, and Ferde Vlazny and Lou Dvonch in their unique comic creations highlighted a cast composed mainly of undergraduates of the Loyola nursing schools and the Arts campus. Kenneth Hayes edited a refreshing musical score which exhibited the vocal talents of Mary Belle Hess, Marion Regan, Theresa Pfister, Norbert Essig, Paul Von Ebers, Noel Lenihan, and Larry Thielen.

Comedy skits of a lively and diverting nature were written by James S. Tyrrell. Randall "The Duke" Ring as assistant director and all-around overseer completed the production staff.

LOYOLAN

This book comes as "The Summing Up." It is an accounting, the grand total, not only of the work of the student body during the past year, but also of four centuries of Jesuit, and untold centuries of growing civilization. The pages of the 1942 Loyolan are, as it were, the leaves on the tree which is Loyola. The opening pages of the book trace the roots of that tree, showing the founts and springheads from which it draws its ideals, methods and traditions. The pages that follow the opening section show what these have resulted in at Loyola. In one respect, then, it is a yearbook; in another, it is the record to date of Christian education.

The editors of the book have tried to present this theme faithfully throughout their work. The pictures, writeups, and layouts have been planned and executed with this purpose in mind.

The whole cannot be greater than the sum of its parts. That is one of the fundamental axioms of geometry. And it applies to a yearbook in the same manner in which it applies to mathematics. A book cannot be better than the staff which turns it out. The editors this year have been fortunate in having an ambitious, energetic, and capable group on which they could lean. That they did lean is best evidenced by the fact that they moved the deadline and publication up nearly a month, due to troubles caused by the present emergency, and the staff did the impossible by enabling them to present the printer with his copy on time.

Leonard Hilts handled the position of managing editor. His was the job of gathering up the loose ends, taking care of the thousand and one little jobs that besiege an editor, and acting as coordinator between the various section editors.

The veteran of the various sport staffs around the campus, L. James Byrne, took his last fling at collegiate copy, and with his associate, B. George Cunningham turned out a sports section par excellence.

DR. MORTON D. ZABEL
Head of the English Department and Moderator of the Loyolan

Edgar Martin is the brain behind the entire 212 pages of the 1942 Loyolan. He took over the editorship this year after three years in the photography department.

To the managing editor goes the task of doing everything the editor does not do. Len Hilts handled the job efficiently.

August Lolli was responsible for all of the candid and informal photographs, as well as many of the clubs and groups. He was photography editor.

Two veterans of the staff, Pinky Byrne and Warren Clohisy, who handled the sport section and the senior section respectively for the second year. Both of them turned in their sections complete without outside aid, and for that reason were ideal editors.

Francis Rossing was editor for the nursing schools, and enjoyed the job. James FitzSimmons was chief of the copy staff, while Joseph Condon did art work and made publicity posters for the book.

LOYOLAN

In spite of another pressing engagement, Lawrence King, abetted by Anthony Spina, organized the fraternity section. He wanted to put clouds in the margin and use stars for a background, but we aren't all as happy as he. Francis Rossing had the enjoyable task of handling the copy and pictures for the nursing schools.

Ray Kennedy, another veteran, took over the Organizations after having put the finishing touches on his last issue as news editor of the Loyola News. Linton Johnson, the second of a long line of Loyola Johnsons, cooperated with Ray in his capacity as Activities editor. Jerome Bowman inherited the extremely difficult position of schools editor and worked for most of the year at his task. The result shows his efforts. August Lolli, the photograph editor, is responsible for almost all of the six hundred pictures appearing in the book. His was the most laborious and the most fruitful position on the staff. John Gannon and Frank Derby were responsible for seeing that the downtown schools had coverage.

Two of the most difficult spots on the staff are the posts of organizations and activities editors. Linton Johnson was entrusted with the duties of the latter, while Ray Kennedy ably took care of the organizations.

Jerry Bowman was the traveller on the staff this year again, holding down the office of schools editor for the second year. Lawrence King, in spite of pressing engagements, managed to do the work in the fraternity section.

THE LOYOLA NEWS

That the Loyola News over the past year attained a high degree of technical perfection is shown conclusively in the fact that the News received All-American ratings from the Associated Collegiate Press critical service through both semesters of Sam Nickele's tenure as editor.

Technical perfection, however, was not the only type of excellence striven for by the staff. Past editor Robert Wallace had set up a tradition of accurate all-university coverage which, after all, is the real objective of any school publication. This matter was handled with a thoroughness found only in the most conscientious of editors. A survey taken by the Loyola Union proved this work was not in vain, for more students throughout the university were shown to have read the paper than in any previous year.

A look at the staff shows ample reason for the many achievements of the News over the last year. Editor Nickele had been working his way through the university with a job at the Associated Press which job gave his work an authoritative touch that comes only from real newspaper experience. Previous experience on the News as copy editor had provided him with more than adequate knowledge of particular problems confronting that publication.

There was no managing editor on the staff last year. The job was split up into three particular positions; assistant editors in charge of news, make-up and sports which were put into the hands of Raymond J. Kennedy, C. Ross Littig, and L. James Byrne, respectively. Each of these men had proved a specialist in his particular field in previous years and for this reason the faculty board of publications decided to hold them at the jobs at which they were most proficient. Such an arrangement cut Nickele's work to a minimum and allowed him to spend most of his time with the editorial page.

New editor, Leroy Gudgeon, takes News responsibility from old editor, Sam Nickele

Kennedy's job required that he take complete charge of assignments and that he keep in close contact with the reporters, seeing that they observed deadlines and handed in only presentable copy. The position was handled with a thoroughness and efficiency that not only improved the calibre of copy, but also developed several freshman reporters into reliable and experienced writers.

Littig provided a professional style of make-up that is rarely seen in a college publication. Copy evaluation, placing of cuts, and appropriateness of heads in issue after issue achieved a perfection never before seen in the Loyola News. It will undoubtedly be a long time before the News will be able to fill the gap left by his departure.

Byrne, better known as "Pinky," veteran of the various sports sections throughout the school, including the only one ever to appear in the Quarterly, spewed athletic propaganda from his column, "Chalkin' 'em up." Covering events in person just before press time and then writing them up in professional fashion, Byrne's coverage of Loyola's sports was most complete.

The position of business manager was also handled with the highest possible efficiency. John Philbin secured more advertising space than had ever before been enjoyed by the News. Frank McGarr and Carl Hayden were frequent contributors to the editorial page and submitted articles both well written and pertinent to subjects with which the editorials of a college paper should deal.

Ho-Hum died a quiet death with practically no mourners. This so-called humor column was supplanted by a series of popular satires on student life and life in general written by H. Warner Pierson and enjoyed a popularity achieved by no other section of the paper. Frank Considine's "Campus Broadcasting System" continued to keep the student body informed as to the social misdemeanors of the Arts campus night-lifers.

Jim Ostler proved invaluable as an assistant to copy editor Kennedy and Gene Dolehide was the capable assistant to Littig. Barney Cunningham, as aide to sports editor Byrne, came up with an abundance of ideas for the improvement of the section. Bill O'Connell and John Meagher were also copy editors. LeRoy Gudgeon handled the never ending task of contacting the various schools in the university and seeing that all received the publicity due them. Regular contributors from the various schools were Robert Tornello of the Medical School, Mary LeRoux of the School of Social Work, and Eymard Doyle of the Dental School.

The board of editors of the News for 1941-42 included Ray Kennedy, News Editor; Ross Littig, Make-up Editor; and Pinky Byrne, chief in the Sports Department. Barney Cunningham was assistant sports editor last year, and is the new managing editor. Bill O'Connell, the present News editor, was rewrite editor last year.

Gudgeon was rewarded for his untiring efforts as correspondence editor at the semester when he was appointed editor-in-chief. His staff includes Barney Cunningham as managing editor, Bill O'Connell, news editor, and Joe McKittrich as sports editor. John Mortell relieved Tom O'Brien of his job as circulation manager, Bill O'Brien was named business manager, and Dan Calibraro was made copy editor.

Changes made during the year found the popular Mark Guerin leaving his job as moderator to accept a commission in the Navy, and the Meyers Publishing Company becoming the printer. Guerin was succeeded by co-moderators Dr. Louis Tordella and Edward Schneider. The acceptance of Meyers as the printer allowed the paper to come out twenty-eight hour earlier than it had done in the past and provided for greater freedom in the use of new pictures inasmuch as the cuts could here be engraved at a much lower price.

LOYOLA

QUARTERLY

Editor William Ryan, besides maintaining the traditions set by former editors, has made many innovations both in the style of the magazine and in the features.

The Loyola Quarterly, once the "somber savant," as the Canisius Quarterly put it, this year regained something of the common touch. The most noticeable change was the introduction of an illustrated cover for the first time in the magazine's thirty-nine years of existence.

There was, moreover, a change in the tenor of the Quarterly's content—articles and verse became lighter in tone, although the literary quality was preserved. Among the technical innovations were the re-instatement of "The Coffee House" and the drama review section. "The Postman Cometh," conducted by the editor, and "Musical Opinion," under Stuart Cullen were two features quite new to the Quarterly.

The matter of personalities is important, too, in considering the Quarterly of this past year. The editor, William Ryan, had an excellent staff of active workers. Dominic Quinn, as make-up editor, and James FitzSimmons, as book review editor, performed nobly; Mr. FitzSimmons contributed prolifically and Mr. Quinn wrote, circulated, and secretaried. Stuart Cullen was music editor and William Joyce, business manager. Conspicuous contributor, Frank McGarr, had actual functions ranging from those of office boy to research work.

Harry Pierson, Loyola News columnist, brought his clever style all the way from the fourth floor to the basement; John Ruddy, Kenneth Hayes, Daniel Harkin, John B. Maloney, Leonard Hilts, and the hardy perennial, Norbert Hruby were other contributors.

We remember the clever, sprightly touch of all Dan Harkin's verse (e. g., "La Repas Sans Merci.") one of which was quoted in the Loretine of Webster College in Missouri. We think, too, of Ken Hayes' fine discussion of Paul Elmer More, and of Harry Pierson's burlesque translation of Beowulf. William Ryan's "Signifying Nothing," which questioned the value of grand opera, evoked much comment. Len Hilts added a tinge of the unique by reviewing Mr. Dooley's America, his uncle's biography, before the book was published.

But the list of innovations to the Quarterly extends beyond the above mentioned features. This year it: (1) re-decorated the office walls; (2) bought some paste and carbon paper; (3) put a rug on the office floor (but it had to be removed); and (4) came out on time.

ROUGH WRITERS

Founded a year ago, the Rough Writers is an organization intended to give embryo writers an opportunity to air their works before a critical audience. The club was founded by Father J. V. Kelly, S.J. and Mr. John Gerrietts, present moderator, in the late part of 1940. At weekly meetings the members present original pieces, which are discussed in round table fashion.

Twice a year the club sponsors a contest in which prizes are offered for poetry and fiction. The winner of the fall contest of this year in both the prose and poetry sections was James A. FitzSimmons. The judges of the contest were Mr. Svaglic and Mr. Supple, of the English Department.

The officers of the club for the past year have been James A. FitzSimmons, president, and Leonard F. Hiltz, treasurer. The membership is limited in order to facilitate discussion. In his address at the mid-winter dinner of the club, Mr. Svaglic who had been present at earlier meetings stated that he believed the purpose of the club, to develop the writing faculty, was being fulfilled admirably.

CURTAIN GUILD

The Curtain Guild, Loyola's dramatic group, this year turned to intentional comedy with its presentation of George Abbott's comedy farce See My Lawyer. The choice was the most successful dramatically and financially that the Guild has made in the past few years. The entire production was under the direction and tutelage of Mr. Bert Walker, director, and the Reverend Edward Carrigan, S.J., moderator.

The chuckle-choked vehicle offered a story of young law in Manhattan. The law firm of Lee, Russo and O'Rourke, destitute of legal patronage, rather despairingly awaits the advent of a cash client. Bert Fauls, Commerce junior, in the role of Bobby Carlin, eccentric millionaire playboy, provides the long awaited opportunity, and the play goes on through the mad whirl of incidents and coincidence as the firm seeks to handle and keep their "one and only" out of trouble and in their clutches.

The exasperated three, William Ryan, Arts senior, William Weldon, Arts sophomore, and Tom McCann, Arts freshman, very ably took their parts with almost perfect characterization. Don O'Brien, Arts sophomore, in the role of their shyster office partner provided many of the evening's laughs with a dialect belying his parentage. Carl Hayden, Arts senior and Guild veteran, provided a serious threat to the fortunes of Lee, Russo, and O'Rourke, in his part as the Carlin family lawyer seeking to extricate his ward, Bobby, from the toils of the firm. Bob O'Callahan, Arts senior, Ray Kennedy, Arts senior and Guild president, Jim Pitaro, Arts junior, Jim O'Neil, Arts sophomore, and Arts freshmen Clare Acton, Matt and Harold Schnitziuz, and Tom Gorman filled minor roles which kept the show moving along its fantastic way.

The characterizations of Ryan, Fauls and O'Brien were perhaps the main factors in keeping up the mad pace of the comedy. The entire cast presented interesting and individual portrayals, contributing much to the success of the show and the enjoyment of the student audience.

Frank Considine, Guild business manager, and his staff, Bauer, Szul, Mullen and others contributed greatly to the success of the production from the point of view of finances.

At the Guild's annual banquet the officers for the forthcoming year were chosen. Retiring president Ray Kennedy was succeeded by Frank Considine, and Bert Fauls took the post of vice-president in place of Jack Clifford, Guild veteran and Arts senior.

MUSIC

The knowledge and appreciation of music has been and always will be one of the essential components of a true classical education. In recognition of this fact, the musical organizations on the campus are held in esteem by both students and faculty alike. The Orchestra and Glee Club are integral parts of the extra-curricular program at Loyola.

The Glee Club, under the directorship of Director Graciano Salvador and the presidency of Norbert Essig, has completed another busy and successful year in its long history.

Just before school was adjourned for the Christmas holidays the Glee Club offered a seasonal concert for the enjoyment of the students. Later in December, the Glee Club presented an oratorio, The Pageant of Peace, portraying the Nativity of Our Lord. In March, a Lenten concert was presented, in the Madonna Della Strada Chapel, which was greeted enthusiastically by a large audience. As an added feature to their well rounded activities, the Glee Club presented a musical farce in the latter part of April. As an end to a perfect season, the Glee Club will present a religious concert in May.

During the course of the past year they have sung at student assemblies, Masses, and other occasions. At informal occasions the club itself and many of its individual members were so much in demand to entertain. Thus it will be seen that the student body has been exposed to a considerable amount of very fine music during the last ten months. This music should help to give them that keen sense of appreciation expected in every college man.

Dr. Graciano Salvador deserves a vote of thanks and appreciation for his capable and artistic direction of the musical organizations on the campus during the past year. In him Loyola finds the necessary qualities of leadership which will assure the keeping alive of her musical traditions.

MOTHERS' CLUB

Founded with the intention of enabling the mothers of the students to become better acquainted with Loyola and each other, the Loyola University Mothers' Club has rapidly become one of the outstanding social groups on the campus.

At the first meeting in September, Mrs. Emmet P. Carroll, the president, outlined a program for the year which proved to be most successful. The regular monthly program of Dessert-bridge parties was again followed with the mothers of the various classes taking turns as hostesses.

On March 24, the Mothers' Club held its annual Day of Recollection with the Reverend Ralph A. Gallagher, S.J., chairman of the Sociology Department giving the conferences. The annual scholarship fund card party and dance was held once more in the Boulevard Room of the Stevens Hotel on Friday, May 22.

After the outbreak of war, the Loyola unit of the American Red Cross was organized under the leadership of Mrs. Fred J. Floberg. Weekly meetings were held in the gymnasium.

FATHERS CLUB

The Loyola University Fathers Club was organized some seven years ago to provide a closer relation between students, school, and parents, and since its inception the Fathers Club has received the enthusiastic cooperation of a large percentage of the fathers of students at Loyola. Under the very capable direction of Mr. Riley DeLano, the president, the Fathers Club experienced one of its most successful years. With the inception of a series of frequent socials at the gymnasium came an increasing demand for some special gathering for the fathers and sons. To fill this need, a banquet was held in the grand ballroom of the Knickerbocker Hotel late in March.

Due to the enforced speed up of the University curriculum, elaborate plans for the year had to be scrapped, and the Fathers Club ended its social year with the Scholarship Fund Party held May 22, in the Boulevard Room of the Stevens Hotel in collaboration with the University Mothers Club.

THE GREEN CIRCLE

Founded seven years ago by a group of school-spirited students, the Green Circle still holds to the original aim of the organization—to promote school spirit and loyalty and to offer their services to all school projects. Members are drawn from among the most active men on the campus.

This year, under the able leadership of Linton Johnson, the Green Circle handled the job of ushering at the Curtain Guild's play, the Glee Club's pageant, and all the home basketball games. Members also assisted in selling tickets for many school affairs.

From February 9th to 13th, the Circle sponsored the Third Annual Loyalty week in order to urge all students to attend the musical show, On the Road. Two general assemblies were held during the week to preview the musical and to tease students into buying tickets.

James Ostler was elected to fill the vacant position of vice-president, and William Lynch was secretary-treasurer of the club. New officers were recently elected to carry on the splendid work for the coming year.

The main purpose of the Chemistry Club is to afford embryo chemists an opportunity to broaden their knowledge of chemistry and its part in research and industrial applications. Cooperative effort is the keynote of the Club's activity. Individual members prepared and presented papers to the group. This pooling of information was supplemented by several movies and field trips.

Perhaps the most interesting trip was the tour of the Underwriters' Laboratories. Those who made the trip were given the opportunity to see the various rigid tests which are given products used in daily life.

The Club acted as official host for the symposium sponsored by the Student Group Affiliate of the American Chemical Society held at Loyola on May 2.

Arts senior Elmer Brennan served as president of the Club and Walter Delaney, Arts senior, was in charge of field trip arrangements. Dr. Joseph D. Parent, professor in chemistry, was moderator of the group.

WASSMAN BIOLOGY SOCIETY

The aims of the Wassmann Biological Society are to establish and promulgate interest in the biological sciences, to participate in the solution of the problems of biology, and to acquaint the members with existing biological phenomena. Because of the fact that almost all of the members of the seminar enter medical school, the importance of the experience gained through the society cannot be over emphasized.

The officers of the society for the 1941-42 season were Eugene Narsete, president; Bob O'Connor, vice-president; Michael Vruno, secretary; John Thometz, treasurer; James Keehan, activities chairman; and Joseph Condon, publicity director.

A great deal of practical aid was given to the work of the organization through the interest taken in it by the Rev. Charles Widemann, S.J., Mr. Walter Hudson, and Mr. Wilfred Horner, professors in the department of biology. Through the efforts of the officers the group made trips to hospitals, had instructive movies, and a number of interesting lectures.

The interest of the students in this organization is manifest by the large number of members appearing to the left.

SPANISH CLUB

Following 1929 there came a decreasing interest in the Spanish language in American colleges and universities. Spanish courses were dropped from the curriculum on the Lake Shore Campus.

In the years preceding the present crisis the development of better relations with our neighbors to the South it became apparent that it was necessary to learn something of the origin and history of these neighbors whom we hoped to cultivate.

Spanish courses were reintroduced at Loyola. In the few years marking its return its popularity effected the rebirth of the Luis Vives Club which flourished in the years before Spanish was dropped. The purpose of the Club is to acquaint the student of Spanish with the customs, international relations, and history of Spanish peoples.

Several times during the year the Club held socials and parties with the Spanish Club of Mundelein College. On these occasions Dr. Graciano Salvador, moderator of the group, gave interesting talks on the influence of Spain in America.

Le Circle Français, since its reorganization in 1925, has been a very active organization on the Lake Shore campus. This year, under the leadership of Tony R. Spina, president, and John Bayley, vice-president, the club has successfully followed the basic aims outlined at its inception—a more detailed study of the French language and culture than is possible in the classroom and a series of social activities to pleasantly enhance this general aim.

During the regular meetings, papers were read by members on outstanding French dramatists, musicians, and scientists. Members then discussed the points brought up in the paper in lively, informal sessions. These discussions encouraged a more active participation of all members in the topic at hand. Conversation in French was also encouraged among members so as to increase the members' ability in the language and to augment classroom practice.

On the social side, the French Club this year sponsored two events of interest—a group party for a presentation of the opera Faust and a dinner at Chez Emile.

COMMERCE CLUB

In October of 1941 the Commerce Club was formed of the old Finance Club and the Economic Seminar. The Finance Club established on the Lake Shore Campus, was originated by Doctor Walter A. Foy, Assistant Professor in the Department of Economics. The Economic Seminar was founded on the Lake Shore Campus by Doctor Theodosi Mogilnitski, Associate Professor of Economics in 1938. The purpose of the new organization is to enable the students to get first hand information and knowledge of business and finance from people well known in their particular field. At each meeting a paper is voluntarily presented by one of the members or there is an address by a well known business man. Each paper is followed by an open discussion which enables the students to clear up any doubts which may have existed concerning the practical applications in Economics, Finance, or Political Science.

The club receives the wholehearted support of the faculty of the Commerce School, and has fast become a popular institution about the Commerce School through the enthusiastic cooperation of the student body. For this reason, it helps to maintain the Jesuit policy of close union between professor and student.

*I*NTERNATIONAL RELATIONS CLUB

The present world conflict would seem to have left the International Relations Club with no subject matter except the problems the situation presents. However, rather than concern itself with the well-worn topic of war causes or the discussion of post war conditions on the grounds of a hypothetical outcome, the Club turned its efforts towards a more political subject: Inter-American relations and the Good Neighbor policy became the center of interest.

The Club concentrated its efforts in pooling information and studying results for the benefit of the five delegates sent to participate in the district competition of the Extempore Discussion Contest sponsored by the U. S. Office of Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

On March fourth, the group was host to a discussion group from the University of Notre Dame. The student guests, all residents of Latin America provided an interesting and informative evening.

Several delegates from the I. R. C. attended the regional Conference of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, held at Ball State Teachers College, Muncie, Indiana, March 27 and 28.

*I*NTERNATIONAL RELATIONS GROUP

In December of 1941, Dr. Tibor Payzs, instructor in political science and formerly of the Royal Hungarian University of Budapest, Hungary, seeing the need of an organization which would bring together students with interests in history, economics, political science, philosophy, and sociology, organized the International Relations Group at the Downtown School. The purposes of this Group are: First, to prepare student minds for the problems which will emerge from a victorious war; secondly, to discover that international relations means cultural relations as well as political and economic relations; and thirdly, to promote interest in the study of political science.

In order to maintain an entirely democratic spirit in the organization—a spirit which would be conducive to free and easy discussion—no officers other than a recording secretary were appointed. Sam Nickele, Arts senior, was chosen to fill that position. The discussion at each meeting is led by a different discussion leader, who also acts as chairman.

Meetings of the International Relations Group are held once a month in the Downtown School. Usually present at each meeting is a representative from a foreign consul office or some of the members of the History department of the University.

*F*RATERNITIES

In the following pages is found the 1942 roster of Loyola fraternities—social, professional, and honorary. They are an important part of the student life, giving the student an opportunity to participate in various forms of social activities. Included in fraternity activities are banquets, dances, initiations, and house parties, which teach the student the value of close Catholic fellowship. We present the Fraternities.

ATHLETIC BOARD

THE REVEREND EDWARD F. MAHER, S.J.
Chairman of the Athletic Board of Control

With the growth of athletics at Loyola the need was felt for a controlling agency whose business it would be to see that the athletic policies of the school were correlated with its scholastic policies. This agency was organized six years ago under the name of the Athletic Board of Control. The duties of the Board are mainly concerned with decisions on all questions of athletic policy. In particular, the Board reserves the right of approval upon all scheduling of games or meets.

Father Edward F. Maher, S.J., chairman of the Board, is serving his third year in that capacity. Other members of the Board are Leonard D. Sachs, varsity basketball coach; Alex Wilson, varsity track and swimming coach; Jerry Heffernan, boxing instructor; Wilbur Kautz, freshman basketball coach; John Hayes, assistant professor in the School of Law; and the Reverend William Finnegan, S.J., dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

COACHES

LEONARD D. SACHS

Coach of the basketball team and member of the Board

Loyola has long boasted one of the finest coaching staffs in the country. It has been a tradition here that once a good coach is found he is appreciated by students, faculty, and alumni and is assured of a job as long as he wishes to stay.

Leonard D. Sachs, basketball mentor, is regarded by all who know the game as one of the ranking coaches in the country. Year after year he turns out top-notch teams. Coach Sachs this year celebrates his nineteenth year as cage coach and has yet to produce a team of which Loyola or any other school would not be justly proud.

Al Wilson, track and swimming coach, is a comparative newcomer, having been with the school for only ten years, but he has the knack of producing winning teams. Under his tutelage both track and swimming have enjoyed a steady rise in perfection. In addition to his duties with these two squads Al also is in charge of the physical education program and acts as moderator of the intramural board.

Jerry Heffernan, our boxing coach, has not had enough men reporting to enter complete teams in inter-collegiate competition. He does, however, make polished boxers of those who do report and enters them in local amateur tournaments when he considers them proficient enough to hold their own in this kind of competition.

The final member of our coaching staff is Wilb Kautz who is in charge of freshman basketball. His job is to take players with only high school basketball behind them and turn them into finished cagers fit to meet the finest competition the country can offer. He is not hired to win games, but to fit men for varsity competition.

ALEX WILSON

swimming, and member of the Board*

JERRY HEFFERNAN

Boxing instructor and member of the Board

Coach Alex Wilson discussing the Illinois Tech. meet with team captain Lenover and members of the team.

TRACK

The Loyola track team was well on its way to one of the most successful seasons it has seen in years at the time this section met its copy deadline. The indoor season had been completed and victories had been chalked up in the Illinois Tech Relays and the Chicago Relays. The squad had also placed second in the Midwest meet and had won two of its three dual meets. The dual wins were scored over Illinois Tech and North Central while a close defeat was taken at the hands of North Central.

The outstanding accomplishment so far in a season which will probably find such accomplishments piling higher and higher as the year goes along was the breaking up of Michigan Normal's three year monopoly at the Illinois Tech Relays. Individual honors went to Amon Luckey, who took third in the high jump, to Art Lancaster, who took third in the high hurdles and fourth in the lows, and to Joe Dougherty, who took fourth in the 60 yard dash. The most important factor, however, was the work of the relay teams. The sprint medley event, the final event of the evening, was won for the Ramblers by a team composed of Dougherty, Jim Gorman, Don Lewis, and Max Lenover. The mile relay squad, although dropping the baton, managed to place second and the two-mile team placed third. Competing in these events were Jack Hennessey, Dan Howe, Bob Wagener, Norb Essig, Dougherty, and Lenover.

Lenover was outstanding in the Midwest affair with wins in both the mile and half-mile events. Essig took second in the two-mile, although he fell in the final quarter-mile. Other points were picked up by Howe, Lancaster, and Len Zimny. The relay squad, composed of Jim Wehrheim, Hennessey, Howe, and Lenover, placed second. The mile relay team successfully defended its championship in the Chicago Relays when Hennessey, Dougherty, Howe, and Wehrheim took first in this event. Although Lenover competed in the open 1000-yard run along with three of the country's outstanding distance men, nobody seems to know who won the race. A mistake made by the officials had the runners go an extra lap and Mitchell was ahead at the end of this particular distance, but when the mistake was caught nobody knew whether Lenover or Gen Venzke was ahead at the regulation distance. As a result all three received first-place medals.

Between the time this was written and the end of the season, the Ramblers were slated to compete in the Texas Relays, the Drake Relays, and the Elmhurst Invitational Meet. Dual meets were scheduled with Milwaukee State Teachers, Michigan State, and Bradley Tech. Lenover, as has been the case for the last three years, once more has proved the backbone of the team. However, the most pleasant surprises of the season were offered by Jack Hennessey, a sophomore and Amon Luckey, a freshman. Although Hennessey was around last year, he never looked to be more than a mediocre runner, but this year he has suddenly blossomed forth as one of the finest quarter-milers and sprinters Loyola has ever seen. Luckey is by far the best high-jumper ever to work for the Ramblers and one of the best in the country.

The coach finds out what the squad can do against the watch.

CROSS COUNTRY

The Cross Country team recorded two wins and one loss in dual competition and took third in the state meet at Normal, Illinois.

Captain Max Lenover completed his fourth season, undefeated in dual competition. In the state meet Max came home ahead of the field, while Norb Essig captured fifth, and Freshman Bob Wagener, twelfth.

The season opened against Butler. Though Max and Norb tied for first, Butler managed to win 25-30 by taking the next six places.

Loyola won the next two, Milwaukee State Teachers and Illinois State Teachers falling by the same score 26-29. At Milwaukee Max and Norb tied for first, Wagener was fourth. At Charleston Max was first; Norb, second; and Wagener, fourth.

Notre Dame won the eleventh annual Loyola Invitational as Oliver Hunter and Tony Maloney, both of Notre Dame, tied for first.

Emil Mennes, Jack Hennessey, Bill Watts, Santo Ruggero, and Larry Theilen were the lads who gave Loyola support in the vital places.

BASKETBALL

After two comparatively lean years, basketball at Loyola registered a sharp rise in effectiveness over the last season. Winning seventeen of twenty-three games, the Ramblers downed several of the toughest squads in the country in an attempt to match the "dream team" of 1938-1939. Although failing to reach that mark, they did manage to score more points than a Loyola team had ever before tallied in a single season, 1062.

In the first five games, Franklin College, Arkansas State, Chicago, Denver, and Washington succumbed by an average margin of over twenty points. The next game involved a trip to St. Louis, a few bad breaks, and a loss to Washington, whom Loyola had previously beaten, 45-27.

The squad then continued its trip west, Denver, U.C.L.A., Santa Clara, California, and Omaha falling in quick succession, Santa Clara in an overtime 57-52.

Colorado gave the team a none-too-encouraging "welcome home" at the Stadium, scoring freely in the final minutes and thus stretching a close game to a 57-43 win over the road-weary Ramblers. Easy victories over the Alumni and Rider College preceded the next jolt which was received at the hands of Toledo, 41-37. More than adequate revenge came in the form of wins over Bradley, DePaul, and Western Michigan. The downfall of the Blue Demons of DePaul was particularly gratifying inasmuch as the Ramblers had been shaded in their last two meetings.

Two more set-backs were encountered after the Western game, these at the hands of Creighton and Bradley, a return game played at Peoria. The Ramblers returned to winning form the following week with another victory over Omaha only to duplicate a former defeat at the hands of Toledo. The season closed with a rough and tumble battle against Detroit at Alumni gym. Loyola came out on the heavy end of a 32-29 score.

Pacing the team throughout the season was Captain Mickey Rottner who scored a total of 297 points for a season average of almost thirteen points per game. In addition to his scoring Mickey helped the team out of many a hole with his clever defensive work, his ball-stealing proving especially effective. Second place is jointly held by Jack Stanton and Bob Tietz. Stanton's tricky fake and hook shot accounted for most of his baskets, but his magnificent passes counted for many more than will never be credited to him. Tietz, although scoring ten less baskets than Stanton, counted twenty more free-throws to get his 192 markers. Bob was the fighter of the outfit and pulled the boys out of many a tight spot with his impregnable defensive play.

Jack Dwan placed fourth in scoring with 182 points. Although not lagging far behind in the scoring, Dwan's forte was his outstanding rebound work and sparkling passes. Mike Dougherty, fifth in scoring with 94 points, was the goalie. Hundreds of times he jumped up to tip potential enemy hoops away from the rim. On this practice alone he probably saved the Sachsmen a total deficit of at least 200 points. Pacing the substitute's scoring was Bill Durkin with a total of 56. Bill proved the squad's most dependable reserve as time after time he was called upon in tight spots and time after time he came through in professional style. Other reserves were Bill Graydon, a senior who, in spite of his small stature, proved a valuable man when the chips were down. Len Zimny, a sophomore who shows great promise, and Bernie Carman, a sophomore hook-shot artist who, with a little polish, will probably see a lot of action in games to come.

SWIMMING

Bob Carroll, captain of the team, looks for submarines.

Although this year's swimming squad did not quite reach the mark attained by last year's team, they did have one of the finest records of any squad in the history of Loyola. Taking five of six meets, the team's accomplishments rank second only to those of their predecessors. The one loss was incurred at Milwaukee against Milwaukee State Teachers in the first meet of the season and was not decided until the finish of the final relay.

Among its victims Loyola numbers North Central, 47-19, Grinnell College, 40-26, DePauw, 38-37, Chicago Teachers College, 53-12, and Illinois Tech, 38-28. The outcome of three of these was in doubt up to the last event, the sprint relay. These were the DePauw and Illinois Tech affairs in which the relay could have thrown the meet either way and the Grinnell dual in which the relay, had Grinnell taken it, would have ended the meet in a 33-33 tie.

At Milwaukee the Ramblers swam without the services of their ace 200 yard free styler, Johnny Bransfield, a freshman who not only accounted for several first places in the two-hundred yard event, but also proved a valuable asset to the sprint relay and sometimes to the medley squad. Leading the team in points for the fourth consecutive year was Captain Bob Carroll with a total aggregation of 57 tallies. Bransfield was second with 39. Third in this matter was Jim Mulvaney, a sophomore and considered by Coach Al Wilson as the best back-stroker the squad has ever had. Jim totaled 34 points.

Right behind Jim and with 32 points was Russ Dykstra, a junior transfer student celebrating his first year on the squad. Other point makers were Jack McGiff who did a fine job in the diving department with 19, Larry Menke, a junior transfer student and Carroll's understudy in the dashes with 18, Jim Burke, a utility man with 13, Jack Moloney, Dykstra's understudy with 12, Chuck Bishop, number two man in the back-stroke also with 12, Luke Grimelli, a diver with 9, and Bob O'Connor, veteran 200-yard man with 8.

O'Connor's disappointing showing came as a result of a bad cold which kept him away from practice through most of the season and out of most of the meets. In the last two years Bob had initiated a steady climb which at the end of last year had made him one of the best 200-yard men Loyola had seen in a long time. At the beginning of this season he showed promise of becoming even better, but then came the cold. The surprise of the year came in the performance of Russ Dykstra who no one even knew was at school until the season got underway. He and Jack Moloney, a promising freshman, monopolized the breast-stroke department through the majority of the meets.

Always dependable, Bob Carroll once more came through with the season's most outstanding scoring feats. Much of the team's success can be directly attributed to Captain Bob who went through his fourth season as the team's leading scorer. Jim Mulvanev garnered first places in four of the six meets and looks unbeatable for the next two years. Auxiliary men in the sprint events and relays, Larry Menke and Jim Burke, will both be back next year and should accomplish much in making up for Carroll's loss.

Bransfield proved a windfall in the 200, with O'Connor on the side-lines and no other veterans on which to count. Johnny did himself proud all through the season and it is doubtful if O'Connor at his best could have improved on the freshman star's record. McGiff and Grimelli both were much improved over last year and accounted for several points in diving that proved rather important in the final check-up. Bishop, like Moloney, found it necessary to follow his own team mate, but, like Moloney also, managed to pick up valuable second- and third-place points.

The medley relay team, composed of Mulvaney, Dykstra, and Bransfield, broke a pool record of 1:27 for 150 yards and set the new mark at 1:24.6. The Loyola team might well this year lay claim to the unofficial Illinois college championship inasmuch as they whipped Illinois Central, Illinois Conference champion, and teams either from the state and not in the conference or squads which had previously beaten non-conference Illinois teams. This excludes, of course, Chicago, Illinois, and Northwestern, whose teams compete in university circles.

FROSH BASKETBALL

What was probably Loyola's last freshmen basketball team for the duration, met three teams, Wright Junior College, Illinois Tech II, and the USN aviation mechanics from Navy Pier. They were victorious in the latter contest 15-14. The 47-27 loss to Wright, who won the Illinois College Championship, and the 35-30 defeat to Illinois, were no disgrace. The team, coached by "Wibs" Kautz, was captained by Jake Rodia, starting guard. Other starters were forwards Bill Foley and Gene Brown, center Karris, and guard Harry Pierce. Reserves were Joe Condon, Jack Enright, Pat Pierce, and Peck. Manager was Jerry Joyce.

The backbone of this year's netmen were the three stalwarts pictured here: Cy Schaefer, Ed Hitting, and Hank Scofield.

TENNIS TEAM

The Ramblers should be represented on the tennis courts this season by one of the most experienced net squads in the school's history. Captain Hank Scofield who has been at the number one position for the last three years winning almost all of his matches reports that last year's squad will return almost intact.

Giving Hank plenty of competition for the coveted first position will be Bobby Doyle who, at the number-two spot last year, proved one of the most dependable men on the team. More competition is probably forthcoming from Ed Fredrickson who was number one at Cornell last year. Ben Binderman, last year's number three man, was improving so fast at the end of last season, it is impossible to predict just where we'll find him as the season gets underway.

Bringing up the number-five spot is big Ed Hitting, a sophomore, who also was on the up-grade in the final meets last year. The number six man has yet to be uncovered, but manager Cy Schaefer has been working regularly and shows definite possibilities as a varsity netman. The schedule was not yet completed at the time this book met its copy deadline, but meets had been scheduled with Chicago, Kalamazoo, Marquette, Indiana State, and Western State.

O'Connell, Dwan, Geis, DeLano

GOLF TEAM

After a number of rather erratic seasons, during which the golf squad has suffered from a lack of talent, the spring of 1942 found nearly a dozen top-flight golfers working out in anticipation of one of the best years in the history of the sport at Loyola. As is always the case, recurring visits of December weather in March and April sorely handicapped the players by limiting the practice time, but in spite of this and of one of the stiffest schedules ever undertaken, Captain Dave DeLano was very optimistic of the possibility of an outstandingly successful season.

Returning veterans from last year's successful team are DeLano, George Geis and Bill O'Connell, and the outstanding yearlings who will fill out the squad are Gene Morris, Jack Dwan and Bud Gearon. These men form the nucleus of a team that gave spring sports enthusiasts at Loyola something to cheer about.

Though the schedule has not been definitely completed, matches have been arranged with Notre Dame, Illinois Tech, Loyola Dental School, Northwestern University and Elmhurst College. Marquette University of Milwaukee and the University of Chicago round out the schedule, with the possibility of a late match with St. Ambrose College at Davenport, Iowa.

Meets in the past have left the Ramblers with a won-and-lost percentage of about .500, but if the members of this year's squad live up to expectations, Loyola will have one of the most successful seasons in its history.

MONOGRAM CLUB

The Monogram Club, long an honorary organization whose body consisted of men who had won letters in the various sports, and which had never purported to be more than an honorary group, has, in the past two years, become one of the most active organizations on the Arts campus.

Two years ago, under president Tony Dirksen, the club decided to make the student body athletic conscious and proceeded to sponsor pep rallies, a dinner for the minor sports men, and an athletic honors night. Under its present leader, Hank Scofield, the club has enlarged its scope of activity and has become the outstanding group on the campus in stimulating school loyalty.

Over the past year the club held its first dance, issued basketball passes to its alumni, sponsored its annual athletic honors night, gave a sports dinner which proved more successful than ever, donated trophies to the senior athletes, and awarded a trophy to the year's most popular athlete.

The Monogram Club also ushered at all the home basketball games, held a series of pep rallies, and helped stage a successful loyalty week. At the time this copy met its deadline elections for the coming year had not yet been held. The elections were scheduled to have been held at the club's annual banquet sometime in May. All indications at this time point to the most successful year the club has ever seen.

LOYOLA INTRAMURALS

The intramural season this year, at the time this section met its copy deadline, was well on its way to being the most enthusiastically received and best directed program ever to be held at Loyola. Director Dan Conroyd and his able assistants, Dick Carter, Jim Pitaro, Frank Schaefer, Jack Schiavone, Dick Szatkowski, Tom Allen, Bob Bauer, Dick Buckingham, Bill Carroll, Dan Cotter, Ed Garrity, Bob McGowan, and Ed O'Day, got things started early and kept them going all the way up to the season's climax, the Carnival of Champions, by far the most popular ever to be held as was evidenced by the record crowd attending.

In the touchball tournament the University Club, upper-class champs, downed the Friars, Junior-class champions. The Alpha Delts swarmed over Big Oaks Golf Course and, paced by Gene Morris, whose 82 gave him the individual championship, took team honors in the golf tourney. The U. Club came back in the Fall Relays breaking four records to win easily. In the swimming meet, too, the U. Club came out on top, but only after George McDermott placed in almost every event. The Pi Alphas won the Channel Swim setting a new record by swimming over one thousand two hundred laps. Another record in this event was set by the individual winner, Johnny Bransfield, who completed the five miles in three hours and twenty minutes.

A hectic basketball tourney was taken by the Raiders as they beat the freshman champions, the Streaks. Jim Pitaro became the school's handball champion when he beat Jim Bowman. Bill McGregor retained the table tennis championship in putting down Tom Beresky. Also successfully defending a championship was Max Lenover who beat Micky Rottner in the finals of the pool tournament.

McGowan proved the school's best kegler in downing John Bona for the bowling championship. The Wilson Open Mile, a feature of Carnival night, was won by Larry Theilan. Two novelty features of the Carnival were the Rat Race, taken by the U. Club, and a water polo game in which the Pi Alphas beat an Arts Campus all-star team.

In the boxing tournament championships were won by: Bill Delaney over Bill O'Brien, Bill McGregor over Jack Mullins (TKO), Jay McDonald over Bill Kelleher (forfeit), Dick Buckingham over Jim Burke (KO), Jim Pitaro over Bob Tietz (forfeit), Max Martin over Jack Russell (forfeit), and Mike Collins over Bill McGloon. Wrestling champs proved to be Jack Mullins, Johnny Bransfield, Matt Schnitzuis, Luke Grimelli, and Bob Flanagan. Jay O'Hara won the annual cross-country Turkey run setting a new record at 8:05.2.

Basketball, Bowling and Table Tennis were among the events engaged in by Loyola men and Navy representatives at the Carnival of Champions

LOYOLA INTRAMURALS

Much of the success of intramurals this year and in former years is due to the efforts of Bob Eiden, custodian of the gymnasium, through whom arrangements are made for the use of pool, track, basketball floor, equipment, and the like. Bob has held his position for seven years and has set up one of the most efficient operational systems in the country. It is with much regret that Loyola surrenders one of her hardest workers and most popular leaders to the armed forces of the United States. With all due regard to whomever his successor may be, things athletic at Loyola will probably never be the same until Bob's newest job is completed and he can return to the school to whom he has given his best for so many years.

LIFE

In the next 20 or so pages you will find what the student considers the most important part of the book—the Life Section. Shots from all the dances, the pushball contest, intramural night, the various small activities and just stuff. If you find your picture here—good. If you don't—maybe it's better. In any case, you should find it interesting. Since yearbooks are most often judged by the caliber of the Life Section, we have attempted to make this the best yet presented. You be the judge.

B. M. O. C.

On every campus there are a certain number of outstanding students who lead in every form of activity: in studies, in athletics, in intramurals, in publications, and in extra-curricular clubs. To these men on Loyola's campus the following pages are dedicated. They have been titled B. M. O. C., because these men are just that—Big Men On Campus. The rest of the school looks to them for its encouragement and leadership. The business world looks on them as the highest type of typical college student and as the most likely to succeed in later life. The Big Men On Campus are one of the factors that make a college education so valuable. Their good example in ambition and ability inspires those around them to greater things, thus enabling them to reap the fullest harvest from their four years in school, rounding out their personalities and teaching the technique of doing things properly. Every undergraduate should aspire to these pages and every B. M. O. C. should realize his obligation to the rest of the students. Unfortunately not all of the leaders on Loyola's campus are represented here, due to lack of time and space. This is a cross-section of that extremely important group which we like to term B. M. O. C. We give them to you now.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

The purpose of this, the nineteenth volume of the LOYOLAN, has been to explain the character of Loyola University while continuing the practice of recording the events of the year at Loyola, and to fulfill this purpose many people have devoted much time and energy throughout the year.

The staff deserves the sincerest thanks of the editors. Each man, in assuming responsibility for even a small part of the LOYOLAN, did so in the realization that much of his time was perforce to be taken up in contacting students in all of the farflung colleges of the university as well as in writing copy.

To Dr. Zabel, for his consideration and assistance at times when the publication of this book became a burden, we extend a heartfelt vote of thanks. Whenever major and apparently insoluble problems have loomed on the horizon, his assistance has made the way easy.

A yearbook is a commercial product into the making of which enter the arts of engraving, printing, photography, and cover designing. So we therefore give another vote of thanks to those men who handled the intricate details connected with these arts; they have had more of the responsibility of the book than have the editors. First of all, Fred Montiegel, of Pontiac Engraving and Electrotype Company, besides coordinating the disconnected ideas of the editors in the matter of theme for the LOYOLAN, is to be thanked for the new type of art work which appears for the first time in any yearbook. Edward J. Bryan, our mentor from the Pantagraph Printing and Stationery Company of Bloomington, Illinois, has not only solved our many printing problems, but he has assumed most of the responsibility for meeting the publication date deadline. John Roche of Root Studios has proved that, even after so many years of photographing Loyola's campus, all the pictorial possibilities have not been exhausted. His fine work is evidenced in the opening section, which is his entirely, and in the Senior, School, and Fraternity sections. Without the efforts of Harold Beckett of Kingscraft Products, the LOYOLAN would never have had such a fine cover. The editor is really grateful to Miss Katherine Bonn, for, had she not spent many hours typing copy, the work of the managing editor would have been seriously impeded.

With this page the 1942 LOYOLAN is completed. The Seniors bow out of undergraduate life and into a world for which they are well prepared, the students remaining in hallowed halls carry on, and another LOYOLAN is formulated in the minds of the new editors.
